Conserving Our Legacy of Land and Water

Help Save Incredible Places Like The West Valley Wetlands

Join other business partners who are showing that places like this matter for the future of the Flathead Valley and the incredible way of life we all enjoy here.

The wetlands and farmland in West Valley support some of the highest numbers and diversity of wetland birds in the Flathead Valley - as well as being one of the only known staging areas for sandhill cranes in the region. This unique area is a true ecological and community treasure that deserves permanent protection.

Flathead Land Trust has an opportunity to conserve 400 acres of West Valley wetlands and surrounding family farmland, and to develop a bird viewing area for the public this year.

The new site will serve as an education area to teach about birds, wetlands, farmland, and conservation of habitat with local schools and educational organizations. In order to complete this vital project, and many more like it, we are looking to partner with people, organizations and businesses that value places like the West Valley wetlands.

YOU CAN HELP MAKE THIS ALL POSSIBLE BY JOINING AS A FLATHEAD LAND TRUST BUSINESS MEMBER!
